

15 Clubs Attend Council's Meet

Sweet Home Entertains Home Demonstration Clubs

The county Council of Home Demonstration clubs was held June 19th at Sweet Home with Sweet Home club as hostess. Approximately 130 members and visitors were present with 15 clubs represented.

In the absence of the president, the meeting was called to order at 10 o'clock by the vice-president, Mrs. Shirley Stuart. The opening song "God Bless America" was led by Martha Brunson.

Mrs. Y. T. Yarberry of the Sweet Home club gave the devotional. The welcome address was given by Mrs. H. H. Huskey of Sweet Home followed by a response from Mrs. Elmore of the Washington club.

The group sang several songs. The clubs answered the roll call by telling how many new members they had program started. Several new members were reported and some new added to their rolls since the mattress clubs organized.

Miss Mary Claude Fletcher, the home demonstration agent, gave a report of the District Council which was held in Arkadelphia in April. This is a time when all the council officers from the different counties come together for their business meetings and entertainment just as the clubs have their council meetings. She urged the officers to try to attend such meetings. The officers can gain much by attending such a meeting and can bring back something worthwhile to their club members.

She also gave a report of the cotton mattress program. It seems that this program will use many bales of cotton as 3,118 applications have been turned in to date. Only 224 mattresses have been made but they have until December to make the beds. Time was extended until June 29 for turning in applications so if you know of anyone who has not turned in his application, just make a special effort to see that he turns it in before it's too late. Not only are the families that receive the mattresses benefited, but everyone in general, as the program is removing so much surplus cotton from the market. Leadership meetings will be held this week in order to have more trained leaders to help in this great demonstration over the county.

James Yarberry and Betty Jo Spears of the Sweet Home club gave a musical number. Mrs. Pete Laster and Mrs. Yarberry of the Melrose club gave two duet numbers. Betty Jo Spears also gave a reading. All of these numbers were enjoyed very much. Just come and see the talent that some of our members have.

A very interesting and helpful talk was given by Mrs. W. M. Sparks of Hope on "Selling our Cotton to Our selves." Did you ever stop to think that you must want and appreciate something before you can persuade someone else to have it? That is our trouble today. We as Southerners and cotton growers do not appreciate the things made from cotton. There are so many ways in which cotton can be used in our homes. Just make a check up and see how much cotton you use in your home. To your astonishment, it will be very small. If we will demand cotton materials and put cotton to every possible use that we can in our homes, there will not be such a surplus of cotton each year. We as a nation are waking up to the fact and let us help do something about it.

A cotton style show was put on by some club members and 4-H club members. The following seventeen participated: Vivian Schooley, Washington club; Mrs. Mary Wilson, Sweet Home club; Mrs. W. T. Yarberry, Sweet Home club; Mrs. Floyd Matthews, Ozark-St. Paul club; Doris Daniel, Belton club; Leola Zumwalt, Blevins club; Mrs. Hermon Rhodes, Friendship club; Artres Pipkin, Hope 4-H club; Marie Collier, 4-H club; Mary Dell Hollis, 4-H club; Doris Stuart, 4-H club; Ozark-St. Paul, Alma Hanna, Ozark-St. Paul; Mrs. Ben Stuart, Ozark-St. Paul; Nona Mangum, Washington; Lewis Stuart, Ozark-St. Paul; and Doris Stuart, Ozark-St. Paul. The ones making an A rating were presented with a pair of cotton hose. These included: Mrs. W. T. Yarberry, Marie Collier, Mrs. Shirley Stuart, Alma Hanna and Lewis Stuart.

The meeting adjourned for lunch and everyone enjoyed the eating and visiting hour very much. Miss Fletcher took pictures of the winners in the style show and also of the group.

Afternoon session was opened by group singing. A very helpful R.E.A. demonstration was given by Miss Bernice Strawn, Utilization Division of the R. E. A. She had many electrical appliances and showed the proper lighting system to use in various rooms. She also cooked a meal for us in the electric roaster. You missed a wonderful demonstration if you didn't get to see it. The members guessed how many kilowatts it required to cook the meal and the ones guessing the nearest were presented with the cooked food. Mrs. Lat Moses and Mrs. H. H. Huskey won the food.

After a very enjoyable day, the Council adjourned. The next meeting will be achievement day at Hope. In December the Marlboro club will be hostess to the council. Let us start planning to attend these meetings.

Tiny North American Isle in War's Spotlight

With the surrender of France to the Axis powers, war's spotlight sweeps into the Western Hemisphere, focusing on France's colonial possessions. Among them is St. Pierre, pictured above, a tiny isle of the Cole-Crutchfield Forest. Washington is reported to have sent 12 square miles, about 440 miles from Maine, off Newfoundland. Washington is reported to have sent sharp "hands off" warning to Hitler and Mussolini.

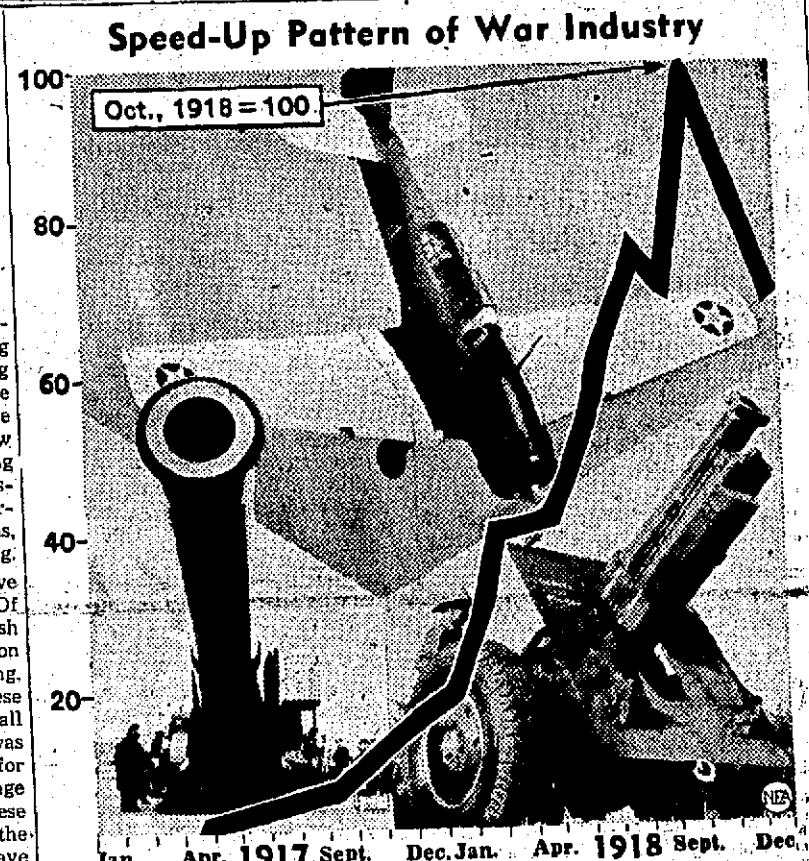

Consent Required to Burn Any Land

Stiff Penalty for Failing to Notify State Forester

The Arkansas State Forestry Commission has announced that beginning July 1 special emphasis, including prosecution to the full extent of the law, will be laid on that portion of the Cole-Crutchfield Forest Fire Law which requires that persons intending to burn brush, new grounds or grasslands, notify an employee of the Forestry Commission of their intentions, giving time and place of the burning.

Up to the first of June, there have been 200 forest fires this year. Of these, 27 were direct results of brush burning, which shows carelessness on the part of those doing the burning. The total acreage burned by these 27 fires is 1733.5 acres. A very small percentage of this burned land was owned by the person responsible for the fire, but the greater percentage belonged to other parties. Of these 27 fires which escaped control of the person starting them 12 cases have been carried to court, all of which were won by the state.

Co-operation in notifying of burnings by those in charge or responsible will save time, and expense to the Commission in investigating such fires. Failure to co-operate with the enforcement of this law is punishable by a fine of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars, a jail sentence of not less than ten days nor more than one year, or by both such fine and sentence. Reporting has been simplified in that the Commission furnishes cards to all who intend to burn. Also, forest telephones are available over the Unit and may be used for this purpose. Cards may be obtained from any employee of the Forestry Commission free of charge. Records show that in this Protection Unit, 107,476 notifications have been received since the beginning of the year. This number has been a

Jap Warships Off Indo-China Coast

Dispatched to Haiphong Harbor for "Observation"

TOKIO.—(P)—Japanese warships were dispatched to Haiphong, French Indo-China port, Tuesday to "observe the movements" of vessels suspected of carrying munitions and supplies to China, the Admiralty announced. The vessels were sent from the China fleet, the Admiralty said, although the size of the force was not stated.

Informed sources said the Japanese government may attempt to declare a "protectorate" over French and Netherlands territories in the Orient. Such a move, it was said, probably would follow discussions with Germany and Italy as to the future of such holdings by defeated European powers.

Responsible Japanese sources expressed concern at the chance the Far Eastern colonies of France and the Netherlands might pass into the hands of the victors in the European war. It was felt that such a situation would be disadvantageous to Japan.

Authoritative quarters said the French colonial army in Indo-China is composed largely of natives and probably would retreat to the interior if actually attacked. Such direct action was not thought to be likely, in view of the complete agreement to Japanese demands thus far.

Cactus Candidate Uses a Cook Book

Says Way to Man's Vote Is Through the Stomach

PHOENIX, Ariz.—If the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, Arizona's State Treasurer William Petersen thinks it's the way to get—and his wife's votes, too. Petersen is a candidate for Arizona governor. He's going into Arizona kitchens for votes by distributing a 55-page cook book he has compiled.

In a foreword to his book, which he calls "Treasurer's Cactus Barrel Full of Arizona Recipes," Petersen writes: "In the 17th century my great, great grandfather was chef by appointment for one of Denmark's princesses. My great grandfather followed in his foot-steps and so the art of following through the generations and was taught me in childhood. I was a chef until, due to World War injuries, I was no longer able to continue this work. But the desire to create new dishes still remains, so in my spare time I have gathered and written this book."

Petersen's book specializes in Arizona recipes, ranging from an Apache country elk dinner to a Yuma county fruit salad.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and wife of Arizona county treasurers and members of congress contributed their favorite recipes.

Petersen's nearest approach to politics in his cook book is a recipe for a "politician's salad," a combination of oranges, apples, grated coconut and peans.

U. S. S. Moo Is the Weirdest "Ship"

The Skipper Commands a Squadron of 309 Cattle

By JOHN S. GROVER
Ap Feature Service Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—The U. S. S. Moo is the weirdest "ship" in Uncle Sam's navy. The skipper commands a squadron of 309 cattle.

U. S. S. Moo is the nickname of the dairy at the U. S. Naval Academy. It's run like a battleship, and it makes a profit.

Naval Academy tailors cuss it because milk-fed midshipmen grow out of their uniforms so fast.

When Commander C. L. Austin, a city boy from Philadelphia, was detailed to Annapolis, cows were not tilled in his life. But he was picked to run the dairy and now it's one of the nation's best. The farm department grows almost all the feed needed on the 860-acre place.

The dairy pastures the milk. A maintenance crew keeps the place shipshape.

The cows' family affairs conform to navy discipline. They have their calves in summer, come into their heaviest milk production after the muddies return from cruises in the fall.

Cows that join the navy lead a soft life. They have a special maternity hospital, get special diets. They even get automatic chemical manicures on their way to pasture. Commander Austin found that giving each cow a roomy private boudoir boosted milk production 30 per cent. Noise decreases milk flow, so a church-like hush descends on the spotless barns at milking time.

All animals in the navy herd are blue-blood Holsteins. There are 125 cows in the milking herd; the rest of the 309 animals are heifers awaiting the call to active duty, and the dozen herd bulls.

The herd has three route customers—the admiral, the commandant of the midshipmen, and Commander Austin. Each gets, and pays for, a quart of milk a day. The rest goes to the academy mess hall.

This super dairy doesn't cost the taxpayers a red cent. The milk is sold to the academy at regular prices and the income pays all operating costs, buys the best bulls available and pays the wages of 55 civilians who man the U. S. S. Moo.

Upton Sinclair Bares War Cause in 'World's End'

You'll have a much better understanding of the remote causes of the present European conflict after reading Upton Sinclair's "World's End" (Viking, $3), a story of the World War era and the failure to find peace. In the last quarter of the novel, Sinclair gives an illuminating picture of the Versailles peace conference—seen through the eyes of his hero, Lanny Budd—the squabbles, bickering and intrigue of Wilson, Clemenceau, Lloyd George.
Essentially "World's End" is the story of Lanny Budd, illegitimate son of an artist's model, Beauty. But it provides Sinclair with opportunity to reveal the machinations of war-makers, the munitions monarchs and capitalist crabs. He deftly recounts the progress of the World War as it parallels Lanny's development, and not until Lanny becomes secretary to a diplomat does the yarn go into the deep end of international politics.
The story never drags. From the moment you meet Lanny and his boyhood chums, Rick the Englishman, and Kurt, the German, until Lanny's final decision as to his future, Sinclair maintains a lively flow of incidents and personal adventure. His characters are real, and if they have faults, make mistakes, they are human errors.
One sees both the allied and the German side of the World War and its aftermath through Rick and Kurt, while Lanny tries to maintain a neutral position. Robie Budd, the munitions salesman and Lanny's father, supplies the data on how the war-makers operate.
Sinclair's portrait of Lanny is outstanding. A sensitive romantic lad, a devoted son, an ambitious scholar and worker, Lanny tries to understand the mad world, tries to maintain balance. Sinclair weaves his story with real persons. His Zaharoff is one of the best, affords new light on the "mystery man" of the World War.

WE THE WOMEN

Check the Small Fry and Take A Vacation

By RUTH MILLETT
Every Mama owes it to herself and to Papa to leave the children behind when they go on their two weeks vacation.

The year hasn't been any too easy with Junior's having his tonsils out and Sister's roller skating herself into a broken arm, and the eternal bills pouring in faster than the pay checks.

Marriage hasn't been very gay and exciting lately. Well—it's vacation time, the one time during the year when Mama and Papa can get away from the responsibilities of marriage and just have fun.

That is, they can if they plan to go away without the small fry. Any parents can find a place to park their children where they will be both safe and happy for two weeks. All they need to do is put their minds to it.

If a camp is out of the question, there is usually a Grandma willing to play nurse. She might even be bribed to do so. "You take the children for two weeks," a daughter could say, "and I'll make you three dresses." Or if not a grandma, a friend with children.

Then, once on her way, Mama should forget she is a Mama and devote herself to being funny and a good companion.

Just because she and her husband have fallen into playing bridge instead of tennis during the year is no reason why they can't get out and take part in active sports on their vacation.

And just because it has been rather difficult to have bull sessions with the children constantly interrupting to ask "Why?" is no reason they can't have long discussions about life during lazy vacation days.

In fact, the nearer they can come to having the same sort of vacation they used to have before the children were born the better.

For two whole weeks they should be just husband and wife—not mother and father. Fifty weeks a year is enough to spend being good parents.

SERIAL STORY

Ticket to Hollywood

BY W. H. PEARS

COPYRIGHT 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, Francie drove for Gustie and they have a hectic day. At dusk they reach the mountains, park on a curve. Gustie is just about to kiss Francie when a car's motor starts. Francie lectures Gustie for parking on a curve. Gustie talks back and the motor threatens a fine and a night in jail.

CHAPTER VIII

BREATHLESSLY Francie dashed into the hotel. Her father and Aunt Hat were seated in a lobby brilliant with Indian rugs and pottery. She told them about Gustie in a rush of words.

John Weston frowned. "Gustie's becoming a problem. I'm sorry the boy showed such poor judgment. But perhaps this will be a lesson to him."

"You—you mean you won't help him?" Francie gasped.
"I'm not sure I ought to, dear," Mr. Weston said. "Gustie's a guest of this state. The officer was only doing his duty. Gustie should learn to obey the rules without squawking."

"Oh, Pops," Francie moaned, "he—he didn't mean to lose his temper."

John Weston said, "Don't worry, Francie. Gustie will work out his own salvation. Whatever his faults, the boy is self-reliant. Now let's have a bite of supper and go to bed. We'll need an early start to make Hollywood by day after tomorrow."

"But, Pops—"

"No, Francie, I've made up my mind."

In the coffee shop Francie tried to force down some supper, but each bite choked her. Her conception of prison life had been derived mainly from sensational movies. She saw Gustie locked up in a dirty cell discovering that she had taken the ticket. She saw him, disillusioned and bitter, launching himself upon a career of crime.

She simply had to do something. And then it came to her in a flash. If she told Pops about taking the ticket he might help Gustie.

Aunt Hat went to her room to write postcards. John Weston settled himself in the lobby with his pipe. Francie sat by his side whispering up her courage. Pops would be angry over what she'd done, but for Gustie's sake she forced herself to confess.

He listened, taking slow, measured puffs on his pipe. When she had finished he said, "I'm sorry you did that, Francie."

"But, Pops, it was just as much mine as his."

"Perhaps. That hardly excuses your behavior. Don't you see what's going to happen? Gustie's making this trip with the idea that he will be reimbursed for broadcasting. Suppose he doesn't discover the loss of his ticket until the night of the program? Being broke almost 2000 miles from home is no picnic."

John Weston arose, knocked out his pipe, and said brusquely, "I'm going over to the jail, Francie. Take the key to my room and wait for me there. I want to talk to you."

FRANCIE moved restlessly about the room. Her father had been gone only a few minutes, but it seemed like hours. She looked down into the street. A familiar name flashed at her from the marquee of the local movie.

Jerry Finney. . . Francie hadn't thought of him all day. And now she was only a few hundred miles from Jerry. She slid her fingers into her pocket and felt the ticket. Like a magnet it drew her thoughts away from Gustie, made her almost forget that she cared for him.

John Weston returned much later. "Well, Francie, I caught the justice of the peace at his home. I finally talked him into letting me pay Gustie's fine in advance. I left $10 with him, but he won't release Gustie until morning. We both agreed that a night in jail might cool the boy down. I didn't see Gustie, but I left word for him to come to the hotel as soon as he was released."

Francie threw her arms around his neck, kissed him. "Oh, Pops, that was swell of you."

"Before Gustie comes, you've something to decide, Francie," John Weston said. "And you mustn't ask me to do it for you."

"What, Pops . . . the ticket?"
He nodded. "If you keep it, two courses are open. You can be honest and tell Gustie you have it. Or you can let him find out for himself. The first way will make him angry; the second will make him hate you. Or you can give back the ticket and tell him you're sorry."

Francie straightened. "Pops, now that you've paid his fine, Gustie will have enough money to get to Hollywood. I can keep the ticket and give Gustie the money they pay me for broadcasting. Wouldn't that be fair?"

"Possibly, Francie, but do you think Gusty will accept help from you?"

Her brown eyes clouded. "If he wants to be stubborn . . ."

"That's hardly the point, Francie. What really matters is how well you like Gusty."

"An . . . awfully lot, Pops, when he's nice, but—"

"Time will smooth off his rough edges, and when that day comes, Elsie City may look pretty good

Americans Famed

in the Revolutionary days when the foundation of American life was being laid.

"In those times, thrift was not an American virtue and Americans, both in their public and private affairs, lived on a scale so comparatively extravagant that today's standards would seem penurious by contrast."

"Pinchpenny." An insult even visiting Europeans, accustomed to high life, were astonished at the open-handed hospitality of Americans, at the variety and quality of foods consumed in this country, and by the almost wanton disregard for the conservation of America's natural resources.

Only in certain regions of New England was thrift considered a virtue. In the south, southwest, and in the greater west which decade by decade was opened, there could be no more accusation than to be called "a pinchpenny Yankee."

Consider, please, a meal typical of the planter classes in colonial times. This is an example of "economy" as practiced in a Virginia or South Carolina kitchen. Dinner: duck, chicken, ham, beef, turkey, five kinds of vegetables, custard, jellied creams, trifles, floating island, beer, porter, punch.

Three kinds of wine brandy and a wide variety of other fancy drinks. This was by no means a meal of banquet proportions.

To this day in many parts of the United States it is considered a poor table which does not offer at least four or more vegetables at a single sitting. As a result, there is inevitable wastage.

The usual answer, "there is plenty more where that came from," is so ingrained that it carries over into more important fields: agriculture, forestry and the exploitation of other natural resources.

Bison Shot for Tongues
Was there any economy of the marvelous timber lands of upper Michigan, Wisconsin and Maine? No, not for many years. And even now, many of our natural resources are being squandered almost as fast as the national debt is rising.

Consider the frontiersman, who would shoot six massive bison and from each carcass remove only the tongue and perhaps the liver (if the beast were a young one. Consider our ancestors' reckless massacre of wild life: ducks, wild pigeons and other game were slaughtered, literally by millions, often to rot on their way to market.

No, it is not only our legislators we must blame for governmental extravagance. We must consider our own everyday lives and see whether we are not ourselves poor economists.

Having spent many years in Europe, I am appalled to see the shameful waste prevailing in the average American kitchen. I see half pats of butter carelessly thrown away—expensive butter that could with every observance of hygiene, be employed in cooking.

Day of Reckoning Becomes Visible

It is an old, sad and true saying that most contented families could live and thrive on what the average American family throws into the garbage pail.

Not only in this respect, but in others, do we transgress the most elementary rules of economy. We see autos left idling, minute after minute, wasting valuable gasoline for no useful purpose. We see perfectly good clothing cast aside because of some whim in styles. We see perfectly functioning radios turned in at disreputable loss from a sense of false shame at owning anything but the latest model.

All these extravagances, small as they are, stem from the same root, namely the vast disregard in early times for American resources which then seemed absolutely inexhaustible.

Now, with some 130,000,000 Americans living increasingly on exclusively American resources, the day of reckoning up what we will have for the future is at last visible.

American hops are said by British brewers to be more bitter and have a stronger scented flavor than the English home product.

sarabia, Roumanian province behind the Dniester.

Bessarabia for many years was Russian territory, but after the World War when Russia became Communist, the territory voted through representatives to join Roumania. Russia never has recognized validity of the transfer of sovereignty.

Reports have been arriving here of large concentrations of Red army troops, tanks and airplanes along the Russian-Roumanian frontier.

Earlier in the day Zagreb, Yugoslavia, reported that Italian troops had arrived at Scutari, near the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier, the past three days and that Scutari had been declared a military zone.

Foreign observers here speculated whether there was any connection between the Russian and Italian moves.

Reynaud to London

LONDON—(P)—The Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent, Wilson Broadbent, wrote Monday that Paul Reynaud, the former French premier, hoped to reach London and with General Charles de Gaulle re-establish his government with himself at the head "somewhere on French territory."

It was reported that Yvon Delbos, a former foreign minister, Cesar Campinchi, former minister of the navy, Leon Blum, premier of the former popular front government, and Edouard Herriot, resigned president of the Chamber of Deputies, would also join the de Gaulle group.

French Dash for Africa

CHANCY, Swiss-French Frontier.—(P)—Down a 50-mile wide corridor through Savoy, scattered French troops were reported racing for the Mediterranean Tuesday in the hope of finding transportation to North Africa to continue their fight against the axis armies. The cease firing order 35 minutes after midnight gave them their first chance to drop back from fighting lines and try the dash to the sea.

French Are Disarmed

BORDEAUX.—(P)—Vanquished France officially laid down her arms Tuesday, victim of the German army, shelled by Italian General, mourning was proclaimed throughout the republic.

The "cease-fire" order, for which the exhausted soldiers of France had waited in the last interminable six hours of battle, came at 12:35 a. m. French time.

France at last was at peace—with more than half her devastated soil occupied by the invaders, millions of her people homeless, untold numbers of her finest manhood dead or wounded and her government a virtual prisoner surrounded by the victorious foe.

Minister of Interior Charles Pomaret, proclaiming this a day of national mourning, said in a radio broadcast, "today France must be silent. Her heart will bleed, but she will forge a new hope."

All flags on public buildings were ordered draped throughout the day, all troops will be confined to barracks and stores, cafes and theaters must be closed.

Armistice terms will be announced approximately 48 hours from the official end of hostilities Tuesday morning.

Room for Only One Loyalty

In the melancholy discussions of the fall of France, many elements are mentioned. Some speak of the failure to provide adequate mechanical fighting tools. Some speak of preoccupation with social reform to the detriment of industrial production. Some speak of Fascist Fifth Column work. Some stress Communist disruption. Others speak of an out-moded reliance on static defense and poor information on what Germany really had.

The cause of so catastrophic a downfall as that of the French can never be simple. All the elements suggested above, and probably many more, had a great deal to do with it. The reasons simply are not fully known at present. Perhaps many years will be required to clear up this bewildering collapse.

Then why go into it at all? For the same reasons that any autopsy is held—an effort to determine cause of death for the possible protection of those still living. We owe ourselves the duty of trying to learn for our own benefit every lesson that can be gleaned from the European tragedy.

Talk to a person who inclines to the German point of view, and he will blame the Communists. "France was rotten with Communism," he will say. "A nation with real will power would have cleaned them all out long ago." And it is certainly true that France was indulging in a general strike less than a month after Hitler's legions marched into the Sudeten territory of Czechoslovakia. It is true that the Communist line was to whisper, "This is an imperialist war for the profit of the bankers—give no aid to preparation." (By the way it is still that in the United States today.)

Talk to a person who travels the Communist party line, and he will hint darkly at Fascist Fifth Column work in high places. He will speak of the Croix de Feu, French Fascist league, and hint that high French leadership was not beyond being tainted. And it is certainly true that experience in Belgium, Holland, and Norway strongly suggests that there may have been something to it. (By the way, are there no persons in the United States today who slyly suggest that "maybe Hitler's way is not so bad, after all?")

Between these two points of view, what is clear? Simply that both groups paraded and the lack of clear alertness that might have averted disaster. Between them, and in the very struggle between them, devotion and bravery of the common soldier of France went down to disaster.

It is passionate, positive devotion to the republic that we need. Loyalty does not consist of snarling at the person whose view is opposite to our own. That is negative. It is positive

Texans Offer U. S. New Plane Engine

HOUSTON, Texas.—Charles A. Toce, Houston mechanical engineer, has offered the United States government a new aircraft engine which he asserts develops twice the horsepower on the same displacement, with less weight than the conventional four-cylinder engine.

Toce wired Sen. Morris Sheppard, chairman of the senate military affairs committee, that he was prepared to produce within 60 days three engines of 300 horsepower each for government tests.

Senator Sheppard replied he would bring the engine to the attention of authorities.

Toce said, "The engine is the result of nine years of development and how has reached the point of perfection." Designed by Toce and his brother, Victor, the engine may be produced at half the cost of others and in mass quantities, he said.

The "New Dawn" rose, a freak of nature, was the first plant potent-

Water sprites at a Long Beach, Cal., pool are making a big splash with a new game—"dive bombing" a target with harpoons as they plunge into the swimming pool. Here's how it's done.

It would be bad enough if he were broke—which he isn't—so Jack Dempsey's best friends should talk him out of his plan to run around the country belting decrepit wrestlers.

If he doesn't need the money, why is Dempsey in training at 45 for the purpose of putting the slug on muscle-bound behemoths as old as himself? My guess is that it is his love for fighting and his longing for the click of the rails which dates back to his kid days as a hobo. His separation from his wife again leaves the one-time Man Mauler free to do what he likes best.

The result can only be the destruction of the picture of Dempsey formed by the millions—young and old—who never saw or knew personally the warrior who could throw fists like no one before or since.

Not long ago, Dempsey refereed a wrestling match in Atlanta between one Cowboy Luttrell and Dory Roche, antiquated bone benders. As in all razzling rows handled by Dempsey, it was in the script for Bad Man Luttrell to make a pass at Dempsey and for the former champion to floor him.

That loosely may be referred to as good, clean fun, but Luttrell popped Dempsey in the mouth, which was not in the book at all.

Somebody suggested Dempsey could pick up a few dollars himself, and put life in the razzling dodge, if he would put on the gloves with some of the toughest of the mat. The first edition is to be inflicted upon the good people of the south in Atlanta, July 1, with Luttrell, who can't fight at all, in the other corner.

Because he stood for something, has progressed in other lines and kept his nose clean, the years have closely knit the bond of affection between Dempsey and the people.

And, said to say, his latest move in connection with cut-and-out hippodromers makes it clear Dempsey does not fully appreciate a reputation which has grown until, still living, he has become legendary.

It took the king a long time to become the joker.
I hope they talk Jack Dempsey out of it.

Window Displays Are Not For Sale

Repeated complaints by Berlin housewives that butchers refused to comply when asked to sell cuts shown in the window led to this decision.

Lindbergh Stand Causes Criticism

The House and Senate Members Boo and Praise

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—Fee, fie, fo, fum!—in the veins of Charles A. Lindbergh runs the blood of a Congressman.

Is that, Washington is asking, what has driven the Lone Eagle to do a little soaring on the radio? Is it because the blood of his father, Charles A. Lindbergh, Sr., who served 10 years in Congress from Minnesota, and of his grandfather, Ole Hanson, who was a member of Swedish parliament, heats up at time of great national stress, that the 38-year-old flyer has plunged back into the spotlight with criticism of the government and warnings that we are trending toward war?

Maybe. I wouldn't know, and Lindbergh is not telling. But whatever the motivation, Lindbergh has caused more furor in Washington in the last year than any other man outside government or congressional circles.

Boos to Praise
Four times in nine months, he has gone to the radio to take issue on matters of government. Last September and again in October, he condemned Congress for its move to repeal the arms embargo. Twice in the last month he has tossed the weight of his popularity and ability into the warning that "we cannot continue for long to follow the course our government has taken without becoming involved in war with Germany."

The reception of these speeches in Washington has run gamut from boos to high praise.

One congressman said: "I suggest that every member of this house study Lindbergh's speech daily until it becomes thoroughly impregnated in and indelibly impressed upon the collective consciousness of this body."

On the other hand, he has been accused of everything from being a "fifth columnist" to the relatively mild charge that "he is a young man inexperienced and totally unfamiliar with our country, its statecraft, and its military matters."

Senator Key Pittman (D. Nev.) said: "If Col. Lindbergh desires to help in our national defense, let him throw aside all his false political advisers and volunteer in the United States government as an expert in navigation."

Let Col. Lindbergh and his advisers know that when one foils with politics in a national emergency, he is foiling with disaster."

Sen. Ernest Lundeen (Farm-Lab. Minn.) said: "We thank God for the Lindberghs, father and son—the immortal Congressman Charles A. Lindbergh, the invincible and intrepid Col.

Charles A. Lindbergh. So long as America follows their crystal clear policies of patriotism we need have no fears for our ship of state."

Those are scarcely drops in the bucket of comment that has been put into the recent Lindbergh record. But it gives an idea of both sides of the picture.

Since Washington is predominantly behind the Administration's defense drive and almost equally as strong behind the Administration's "all aid to the Allies—short of war" program it goes without saying that Lindbergh's popularity has taken something of a nose dive in these parts.

He Will Be Heard
The fact remains, however, that his speeches have carried some weight and it is considered a feather in the cap of the isolationists that they have Lindbergh carrying their fight to the people.

Just who his advisers are nobody knows. In the State Department, some old-timers have said, off the record, they recognize the hand of an assistant secretary of State under President Hoover in Lindbergh's speeches. They think such phrases as "stop these gestures with an empty gun" and "stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion" are the trademark of this former official.

I wouldn't know, but before Lindbergh made his last address, he did confer with Senators Clark, of Missouri; Wheeler, of Montana; La Follette, of Wisconsin; Clark, of Idaho; Representative Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, and other isolationists. They are not all Republicans by any means, the Clarks and Wheelers are Democrats and La Follette is a progressive.

Neither Lindbergh nor the others have been fighting defense—just the "trend toward war."

If it's Lindbergh's political blood that has driven him to become the spearhead of the "stay out of war" movement, he scarcely could have picked a better time to jump into the Washington arena. He may be unpopular with the opposition, but he sure will be heard. The tempest he has already caused has proved that.

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent
Ben Carter Is One Actor Embarrassed by Roles, for He's Really an Agent

HOLLYWOOD — Most of the customers who laughed at the rumormongering Negro bartender in "Little Old New York," and who'll soon be seeing him again in "Maryland," never could guess that acting is just a sideline with Ben Carter. In fact, he's beginning to find demands for his dramatic services a little embarrassing.

You see, Carter is an agent—"The Ace Private of Colored Talent in the Motion Picture Industry." He feels that whenever he takes a part in a picture he is keeping one of his clients out of a job. Besides, acting is a lot more profitable. Carter is a big man on Central Avenue, as anyone could guess by the size of his automobile and the livery of this chauffeur. In addition to representing most of the performers among his race, he is a composer, arranger, choral leader, actor, author, and specialty producer. "Mr. Carter is the Orson Welles of our colored community," said a cafe-au-lait mammy on the set.

Stumbled Into Success
Dapper, dark, and usually wearing a dazlingly dental grin, Carter shares credit for his success with Lady Luck. As a student of music back in Aurora, Ill., he got a job as activities secretary in a Negro Y. M. C. A. where he wrote songs and organized

Writer Picks Up Capital Comments

Ideals Are Gathered From Taxis to Drawing Rooms

By JACK STINNETT
(Author's Note: The following statements picked up in a week's round of the capital, from soda fountain to White House, from capital cloakrooms to taxi cabs, from beereries to drawing rooms.)

WASHINGTON—What Washington is saying:

Wonder if the influx of job-seekers is going to drive the cost of living higher? . . . Capital living costs have been gaining steadily and now are only about 18 per cent under the 1929 high—ho.

What's all this talk about a deal with Japan that would put her on our side and keep her there? . . . Hope Congress does appoint that committee to try to straighten out Washington traffic . . . Gosh, it's awful.

Never saw anything like this Congress before. Think of voting billions of dollars in the house by votes like 100 to one . . . and in the senate 80 to 1. Guess that ought to show the world we can get together when we really got a job to do.

Boom In Marriages

Do you suppose it could be war litters that has sent capital marriages up 40 per cent above normal? Boys figuring maybe a wife will add to their exemptions, if exemptions are needed—girls figuring it may be now or never.

Boy, it's hot . . . but I wouldn't trade places with a guy in the Alps . . . Italy's entrance into the war has added to the capital hostesses' mess . . . That's Senator Reynolds who just went around the corner. He's been here at the state department a number of times lately . . . Trying to get his daughter, Frances, out of Italy . . . She's 25 and a sculptor . . . Been studying over there.

Say, Pal, has anybody ever thought how sore Chicago is going to be if the Democrats DO nominate President Roosevelt on the first ballot? Jus' think, all those people with jeans full of folding money and nothing to do but up and go home!

Lady Sharpshooters
Whaddyou know about these rifle-totin', sharpshootin' women? . . . Hear the Columbia chapter of the Woman's National Rifle association is gonna have 400 members . . . And when they get good enough on the range, they're gonna practice on dummies dropped in parachutes. (Note: The ladies say there's no truth in that last.)

The story just won't die down that Mayor LaGuardia of New York City it going to be the next Secretary of War . . . Remember the old line about smoke and fire . . . But have you heard that Secretary of Labor Perkins may retire too and that she does AFL Dan Tobin may be called to her chair in the cabinet?

"S-funniest town. You can walk down the block-long War Department building and see generals of all ranks. . . . You can walk down the block—colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants long Navy building and see admirals, captains, commanders and ensigns . . . and not once a month will you see a uniform . . . If you ever do, put it in your book that he's a stranger to the nation's capital. Incidentally, there's not a man in War-Navy can tell you why this is.

You know what they're saying about Senator Pepper, the Florida fire-eater, in the present great defense campaign? . . . They're saying Senator Pepper's slogan is "a speech-a-day keeps Frank away."

choral groups. But when he chucked that and headed west five years ago, he didn't have anything in mind. The movie studios looked forbidding, so he wandered into a Hollywood broadcasting station. The receptionist surprised him by saying, before he could utter a word, "Go right in; he's expecting you." So Carter went right in, and a man behind a desk asked, "How'd you like to be on a new program I'm starting? Play piano and sing a few songs." The bewildered stranger said he would like that fine. He performed on the air for more than two years and declares that to this day he doesn't know who he was supposed to have been. Evidently the boss thought that "Ben Carter" was an assumed name.

To Speak Frankly—
After getting acquainted along Central Avenue, Carter discovered a good deal of discontent and distrust between Negro entertainers and agents. "Frankly speaking," he recalled, "the situation was frankly in a state of turmoil. It was a situation that frankly cried out for an honest, industrious young man. I may say, frankly, that I was that man."

Still speaking frankly, he said that clients began to flock to him as soon as they learned that he was scrupulously and meticulously okay about never taking more than his legitimate 10 per cent. He also has staged Negro song-and-dance numbers in pictures, notably those in "A Day at the Races" and "Irene."

He never wanted to act, particularly. But when he goes into a producer's office to try to get a role for a client, the producer often asks Ben Carter to play the part himself. He thus worked briefly in "GWTW" and "Intrezezzo," but was left out of both films when they were finally cut.

He said he felt guilty about taking the bartender part in "Little Old New York." But it worked out fine because when "Maryland" was produced Carter was able to get jobs for nearly all of his clients as well as for a choir of 18 youngsters. And that wasn't all; he even sold the studio a song, titled "Amen."

The cavalry unit of the U. S. Army at Fort Russell, Texas, has been motorized. This was the first and most famous cavalry unit in the United States.

Bruce Catton Says:

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — If the New World nations agree to the "economic union" plan recently proposed here, the United States is in for a program which would make its previous farm-relief and export-subsidy programs look mild.

To begin with, Europe annually buys about $1,500,000,000 worth of Latin American goods. On top of that the United States itself each year exports farm products running to hundreds of millions of dollars. Any international cartel formed to buy and handle the New World's export surpluses, therefore, would have to spend an enormous sum each year—and most if not all of the money would have to be put up by Uncle Sam.

But that only starts it. Once the cartel has bought these goods it will have to dispose of them.

The bulk of them, undoubtedly, would be sold to Europe—Hitler's Europe, or anybody else's. But there is also little doubt here that a large quantity would remain as surplus. What to do about that?

Plan Likely to Be Costly
The administration is firmly set against any plan which would mean the dumping of Latin American agricultural products into the U. S. market, to compete with home-grown goods. It frankly faces the fact that OAKWOOD, O.—(AP)—Military censorship is delaying a series of 12 checker games which postal clerk L. S. Reant is playing by mail with A. E. Brown of Sydney, Australia. Reant said they had been playing since July, 1938, and predicted they would continue for another year.

Ice Age Never Ends
The Ice Age has not ended yet, in some portions of the earth. Polar regions still are covered with the ice cap of that ancient formation. Minnesota studios show that the ice retreated from that state about 10,000 to 16,000 years ago.

Amerillo, Texas, largest city in the Texas Panhandle, is nearer to the capitals of Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma, than it is to Austin, capital of Texas.

oration—then, the argument goes, the danger of economic penetration vanishes.

Plenty of Objections
It goes without saying that there is nothing like unanimity on the virtues of this scheme.

The enormous expense is the first objection. Another is the suggestion that the plan would be unworkable from sheer cumbersome-someness.

However, it looks now as if this program might be approved by Congress.
